Oats for sale at the lumber yard. And now the snow is going again.

For Sale—oats at the lumber yard. Nineteen antelope were shipped from here to Hudson last Monday.

A good work team, harness and wagon for sale cheap by John Bartell. 50 tons of hay for sale 4 miles northwest of town, by Bigelow Bros.

John Burge, of Cedar county, located on a piece of land near Montrose today.

Attorney Hull is up in Dakota this week attending to professional business.

S. H. Jones spent Christmas eve and day at a place indefinitely north east of here.

John Brown has closed his store here and will probably look up a location elsewhere.

A nephew of Herman Konrath from Missouri arrived here yesterday and went out to his uncle's.

The club dance was postponed from last Friday evening to Christmas eve when a good time was had as usual.

Don't forget the masquerade ball Monday evening. The finest time is assured and the best of music has been engaged.

Through the considerate kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie, the editor was treated to a sumptuous Christmas dinner.

H. T. Conley, attorney at law, Harrison, Neb. Will practice in all State and Federal courts, and United States Land Office.

The young folks gathered at Mrs. Weir's Christmas evening and were very agreeable and pleasantly entertained for a few hours.

For Sale—The yard and stock of The Buffalo Gap Lumber Co. at Harrison. Address, F. C. SILKENSEN, Secretary, Buffalo Gap, Dakota.

Mr. Henry Brees, of Runningwater, was in Harrison Christmas day and went down to Crawford in the afternoon, returning yesterday.

It made an extra, special request of Mrs. Bussett's that the friends will all meet with her at the Bible class on Sunday the 30th at the usual hour.

John Bartell has sold his restaurant stock and rented the building to Mr. A. Taylor, who will take possession the first of the year and conduct the business.

The oyster supper in connection with the masquerade ball, will be served at the Northwestern hotel, and this guarantees that they will be done first class.

Mr. Green, while in Wyoming on a hunt recently, discovered a vein each of seven and five feet coal in an unusually accessible locality. He also found mica in considerable quantities.

Mr. Albert Weir, of Rushville, spent Christmas with his mother, sister and brother here. Mr. Weir is a "knight of the stick and rule," being now engaged with the Rushville Standard.

H. Gräswold will build a forty-foot addition to the rear of his store room lately occupied by Mr. Brown, and as soon as completed will move his stock of hardware and furniture into it.

A pleasant little snow fall came Monday. Just enough to make a white Christmas mantle for the earth and to assist the ship air in inducing vigor in the parts who might come in contact with these elements.

We received a query last week from some one but as there was no name signed we cannot publish it. Remember to always sign your letters, provided we do not already know the "non de plume" under which you have been signing.

Mr. John Green, of Lower Running Water, returned Tuesday from a three weeks hunt in Wyoming. He was accompanied by a couple of gentlemen from near Hudson. Game is reported to be quite scarce and very thin.

We would like

To have another load or two of wood on subscription.

To know how many turkeys sprang up to the "happy hunting grounds" in or about this festive day.

Oats for sale at the lumber yard.

We wish to all a "happy new year." The school board have hired Mr. Asyavis to teach the Harrison school this coming term.

More land seekers in town yesterday and all well pleased with the appearance of the country.

WANTED—A boy between the ages of ten and fifteen to learn the printer's trade.

John Thornton started to Ft. Laramie this morning. John must have some attraction on the Platte river.

The Christmas tree and exercises at the church on Christmas eve were a success. The tree was well and fully loaded with many costly and valuable gifts, and a large crowd were present to witness the unloading and receive the presents. The exercises by the school were all nicely rendered, doing credit to themselves and teacher.

According to a decision handed down by Judge Nelson, of the United States district court of Massachusetts, a passenger on a railroad can stop over at any intermediate station on a ticket good beyond that point, and when he is ready to go the company must carry him to his destination on that ticket. The case was against the Erie road, which was mulct out of $1,000 damages for ejecting a man from the train who had stopped over on a through ticket.—Ex.

One of the encouraging turns in the vagaries of fashion is to be noted in the report that the style in dogs has discarded that canine albino the poodle, and the even more idiotic monstrosity, the pug, and that henceforth the correct thing in dogs will be the collie and the fox terrier. The new styles of dogs are among the finest specimens of the high qualities of valor, affection, fidelity and intelligence. The fox terrier is handsome, useful, plucky and generally indicates his good sense by objecting most strenuously to being carried about in the arms of his mistress. As to the Scotch collie, he is as nearly human in intelligence as it is possible for an animal to be, and is superior to the average of mankind in some important moral qualities. The new turn of fashion for dogs will give the votaries of style an opportunity to become acquainted with intellectual amity, if the association to which these high class dogs are to be subjected do not prove distasteful to their minds.

The manufacture of paper is a very interesting study, to look at the rags as they are cut up by a rag cutter, then put into a tumbler, which is a hollow taper cone covered with wire, into which the rags are carried by an endless apron; from the tumbler they go to what paper makers call a devil, or, as refined people say, railroad duster or thresher. This is a closed machine, into which the rags are fed at one end. The inside of this machine is provided with five or six heads or cylinders resembling the cylinders of a threshing machine.

These cylinders thresh and beat the rags very much in their passage through the machine, and dump them out at the end. They are next placed in a rag boiler, which contains a chemical solution, and in which the rags are boiled. This operation is intended to reduce the rags to fibers and to take away all or part of the coloring matter and impurities. After boiling they are placed in a washing engine, where they receive a thorough washing and are made perfectly clean. They are next run through a machine called a Jordan engine.

The machine is hollow, and in shape resembles a cone. The interior of this machine is filled with many iron knives which grind the rags and sever the fibers one from another. After being ground, the rags, now pulp, are put into a tank or receiver, which paper makers term stuff chest. Here the pulp is constantly stirred or agitated to keep it in a proper state of solution and even mixture.

From this stuff chest the pulp is pumped as it is used by the paper making machines into screens, which are machines that operate upon the pulp, as their name signifies, screening the pulp and keeping all impurities out of the paper machine. After the pulp has been screened it looks very much like water, being thin. It is then run upon the Fourdrinier part of the paper machine, where the pulp is violently agitated, which causes the fibers and threads of pulp to intertwine into what paper makers call a web.

From this part of the machine the pulp is fed between guides, where the web of the paper is formed; then it is passed through, or rather between, four press rolls, and pressed, after which it is wound up by a series of rolls through dryers, which are heated by steam.

After it has been pressed and dried, the web of paper is cut into sheets and rolled up into bales, or into sheets, ready for use. The paper is then ready for use.
